

MICHAEL M. TING

Michael Ting is Professor of Political Science and Public Affairs in the Department of Political Science at Columbia University and he also teaches in the School of International and Public Affairs. Previously he has held positions at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and at the Center of Basic Research in the Social Sciences at Harvard University. He is a member of the editorial board of the American Journal of Political Science. He received a PhD in Business from Stanford University and an MA in Political Science from Harvard University. His research interests include American politics and formal models of political institutions, with a focus on bureaucracy, elections, and legislatures. His current projects include primary elections, distributive politics, and computational models of elections with bounded rationality, and regulatory policy. His research has been published in leading journals of economics and political science, including the American Political Science Review, the American Journal of Political Science, the Journal of Politics, the American Economic Review, and the Journal of the European Economic Association.